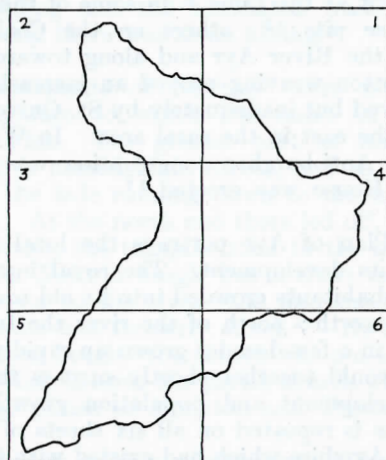

FIG. 14—ARMSTRONGS' MAP SHEET NUMBERS. The Town Plan of Ayr appears on sheet 6.

All places in Ayrshire which are indicated on Armstrongs' Maps are given in Roman capitals with grid references. These grid references include the sheet number (see above), then an indication of the square in which the place is located, referring by letter first to the top or bottom of the map, secondly to the side. e.g., ALLOWAY, 3DF, is on Sheet 3, Square DF. After the grid reference is given the modern name (where known), followed by the parish. The Gazetteer thus forms, incidentally, an index to Armstrongs' Map. Places not mentioned on the Map, and cross-references, are given without Roman capitals.

PARISHES

The following population statistics are as printed in Stat. Acct. XX, 591, 592. The figures for 1755 were taken from Webster's Enumeration, published in extenso in Scottish Population Statistics, ed. J. G. Kyd, Scottish History Society, 1952; the 1951 figures, added for purposes of comparison, are from the Census Report. In the last column are given the page references to the parish accounts in the Statistical Account.

The parish of Newton-upon-Ayr did not come into existence till 1779, and the figure for 1755 is therefore as estimate, with appropriate amendment to that for Monkton and Prestwick (Stat. Acct., II, x.) The figures for the Cumbræes, since transferred to Bute, have been excluded. The modern parish of Ayr has included Newton and St. Quivox since 1895.

ESTATES

In this section of the Gazetteer are included the Mansion Houses shown on Armstrongs' Map, properties listed in Paterson's History, and a few others. Names of owners are prefaced by the date of accession to the property, and if the exact date is not available, an approximation is given wherever possible, e.g. a.1750

(ante 1750), p.1750 (post 1750), ?1750 (possibly 1750), c. 1750 (circa 1750); if no date is ventured, a date in brackets after the name indicates a reference to the person under that year. The Index of Persons should also be consulted. For full titles of sources cited, v. Bibliography; in the case of persons associated with Burns, v. Source list, p. 149.

Sir James Fergusson, Bart., has supplied additional data (from the Register of Sasines, Services of Heirs, etc.) and has corrected numerous erroneous items from Paterson's History. Other errors almost certainly remain. The following section should not therefore be regarded as authoritative, but as a convenient collection of references.

LOGAN, 4FE, Logan, Cumnock. Kyle, 345, 346; J. D. Carrick, The Laird of Logan.

a.1734 Hugh Logan, who extended the estate.

1759 Hugh Logan, born 1739, the "Laird of Logan," a celebrated wit: "The personal appearance of our Laird was extremely prepossessing. His stature was tall, and his form remarkably handsome; while his frank and open countenance was lighted up by eyes, black, full of penetration, and highly expressive of the character we have given of him. In youth his hair was light, but as he advanced in life he became bald, and in his latter years wore a wig assimilating to the colour of his eyes. His weight varied from eighteen to twenty stones. Though not fastidious about his clothes, he was always appropriately dressed, wearing generally a blue or brown coat, with light-coloured shorts, having buckles at the knees. In respect to morals, the conduct of Logan may, by many, be regarded in a great measure unexceptionable; and, what is perhaps not a little singular, considering his associates and the scenes of dissipation in which he but too frequently mingled, only one instance of an illicit amour has been laid to his charge—the offspring of which is we believe, at present living in Cumnock, and is remarked for the striking resemblance she bears to her distinguished parents." (J. D. Carrick, 10). Among his associates were his former Edinburgh schoolmates, Hugh Montgomerie of Coilsfield, later Earl of Eglinton, and John Hamilton of Sundrum. Reduced by the Ayr Bank crash and by convivial living, Logan was in 1798 compelled to sell almost all the estate, and removed to Wellwood, where he died 1802.

Mineral and Industrial Undertakings.

See Ayrshire Collections, Vol. 4; also p. 251 in this volume.

CANAL, 2CC, the Saltcoats Canal in Stevenston parish; $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles long, 12 feet wide, 4 feet deep, opened 19th September, 1772, to carry coals from Seabank and Ardeer to Saltcoats harbour; shares with the Monkland Canal the honours of 'first in Scotland.' Stat. Acct., VII, 15.

COAL PITTS, 4DE, also Ayr Town Plan, in Newton-upon-Ayr. Stat. Acct., II, 270-1.

COAL PITTS, 3DC, in Dailly parish. Coal had been worked here at least since 1560 (Charters of Crosraguel, I, lxi, 122); 18th century developments were limited by transport difficulties.

Coal indicated by symbol, 2CC, in Stevenston parish. The coal of Seabank and Ardeer was exploited by Robert Cuninghame of Auchenharvie from the end of the 17th century and further by his successor Robert Reid Cuninghame after 1770.

Coal Wagon Ways v. Ayr Town Plan.
 COLLIERY FIRE, Note, 3DG, in Dailly parish. See Turnbull, A South Ayrshire Parish; Stat. Acct., X, 497; Aiton, 45. The seams are still burning two centuries later.

ENGINE, 2CC, in Stevenston parish. 'A fire or steam engine was erected near Saltcoats in the 1719, the second then in Scotland. The small cylinder of it was brought from London, only 18 inches in diameter (Stat. Acct., VII, 11). A larger engine of 38 inches cylinder was installed in 1732 (New Stat. Acct., V, 441) and a still larger one in 1784 (V, 444).

ENGINE, 3DE, also Ayr Town Plan, in Newton-upon-Ayr. This engine was of 14 inch bore (Stat. Acct., II, 270).

FINE QUARRIES, 2CC, in Stevenston parish. A variety of minerals was quarried in Stevenston (Stat. Acct., VII, 8), so that this may not be a mere engraver's error for lime quarries.

FORGE, 4GE, ruins in Muirkirk parish. Lord Cathcart and others c.1753 began mining ore, transporting it to Bunawe in Argyllshire for smelting, and making bar iron with the pig iron when it was returned; work was abandoned due to transport expenses (Aiton, 603).

IRON MINE, 4FE, in Muirkirk parish. Probably associated with the ruined Forge (q.v.); iron-mining was extended with the establishment of the Muirkirk Iron Works in 1787.

LEAD MINES, 4FF, in New Cumnock parish. 'There is now a lead-mine working in Afton barony, about 3 miles S.W. from the church, in which a company of Quakers have entered into a contract. Twenty miners are employed, and more are expected according to the apparent success.' Written c.1793 Stat. Acct., VI, 99).

LIME CRAIGS, 4GF, in New Cumnock parish.

Limeheugh, 4GE, perhaps a farm, Muirkirk parish.

Lime Kiln: see Ayr Town Plan.

Moat (?), MOUNT, 4EG, in Dalmellington parish.

MONUMENT, 4EE, at Coylfield estate, Tarbolton parish.

"Within the beautifully ornamental grounds which surround the house of Coilsfield are a scene, which the tradition of the country relates to have been a field of battle; and a stone held in veneration as the monument of old King Coil. It may more probably have been the scene of a battle between the Danish invaders, and the old Gaelic inhabitants of the country. The rude stone may have been originally placed to cover the body of some chieftain, although not that of him to whom it is ascribed" (Stat. Acct., XIX, 457).

MONUMENT, 3DE, Macrae Monument in Monkton parish. James McCrae, born Ochiltree, orphan befriended by Hugh McQuyre (violer in Ayr), went to sea, made fortune in India, where Governor of Fort St. George, returned and bought estates in Kent and Ayrshire, including Orangefield 1734; presented Glasgow with statue of William III in 1734; lent Glasgow £1500 to make up sum levied by Prince Charles 1745; repaid McQuyre (or McGuire) by gifts to his family (v. Drumdow, Orangefield, Ochiltree estates); died in or before 1748, in which year monument erected, collapsed 1749, rebuilt 1750 (Kyle, 596-598; Murdoch, Ochiltree, Ch. IX).

OBELISK, 3EG, in Straiton parish. Erected on Benan Hill by Sir John Whitefoord (Stat. Acct., III, 586).

Miscellanea.

Bailiaries: CARRICK, KYLE AND CUNNINGHAM. The County of Ayr was divided into three bailiaries with the Rivers Doon and Irvine forming the boundaries, while Kyle was itself divided into Kyle Stewart (north) and Kyle Regis (south) along the Ayr-Lugar river boundary.

*Kyle for a man,
Carrick for a coo,
Cunningham for butter and cheese
And Galloway for 'oo'.*

Various versions of this ancient rhyme, whose origin is unknown, are given in Finlayson, Anthology of Carrick, 1925. The traditional spelling of the northern bailiary was Cuninghame, e.g. Cuninghame Topographized by Timothy Pont, c.1600, various editions; in Blaeu's Atlas, 1654, it appears both as Cuninghame and as Cunningham, which latter anglicised form has been frequent since; the intermediate form of Cuninghame is also occasionally found. The bailiaries ceased to have any significance after the abolition of heritable jurisdictions in 1747.
