ALISTAIR LINDSAY
1923 – 1996

The genesis of this publication lies in the work of the late Alistair Lindsay. He was born and brought up in Glasgow, where he spent much of his life, and was a solicitor by profession. An enthusiastic historian with an indomitable spirit, Alistair had an abiding interest in the history of Ayrshire, derived from his own genealogical interests, and was a generous researcher who enjoyed nothing more than sharing his findings with others. To this end, he collaborated with the late Dr John Strawhorn (1922–1997), especially on the latter's The History of Ayr (1992), for which he provided transcriptions of the stent rolls and parts of the burgh records.

As a result of this immersion in the burgh records, Alistair conceived the project of extracting and publishing all the burgess enrolments from the council minutes. He was following an honourable path: in his work he was guided by Anderson's earlier work on the burgesses of Glasgow. His own contribution to the history of his home city was A list of Legal Firms in the City of Glasgow...which have been absorbed, amalgamated or have otherwise gone out of existence: extending from January, 1953 to December, 1994 (1996), the result of several years' labour.

Unfortunately death overtook Alistair Lindsay before he could see the Ayr burgesses project through to fruition, although the initial extraction of the names had almost been completed before he died. It was his wish, and the wish of his family, that the completion of the work should be entrusted to the Ayrshire Archæological and Natural History Society, and that the Society should arrange for its publication in some form.

We hope that this publication would have met with Alistair's approbation.

INTRODUCTION

The burgh of Ayr was founded in 1205; its charter of erection was granted by William the Lion, and sealed at Lanark on the 21st of May that year. From modest beginnings as a village of perhaps a few dozen buildings in the thirteenth century in the shadow of a royal castle, Ayr grew to become a market town and one of the west coast's leading ports, by late seventeenth century consisting of over 700 buildings[1]. The key to the burgh's prosperity was its burgesses. The charter of 1205 refers to burgesses dwelling in the new burgh, and to various rights which they received through its creation. In essence these rights allowed burgesses to live outwith the feudal ties which bound the landward area of the county, and, crucially, to operate and regulate a trading monopoly within a specified geographical area. With these rights came responsibilities; principally the cess, a tax paid by each burgess according to the size of his property within the burgh, and the duty to play his part in the watch and ward, including maintaining a presentable set of arms and body protection, specified in successive acts of parliament.

At its foundation, the new burgh of Ayr required burgesses and most of these were recruited from outside the south west of Scotland. An echo of the 'international' recruitment by the crown, and by the burgh itself, can be heard in the names of some of the burgesses in Ayr in the seventeenth century: Fleming, Norman, Galloway, Holland, Inglis(h). Initially burgess status was conditional upon residence in the burgh and occupation of a burgess plot, The burgess, even though he may have been a merchant or craftsman, was at heart an agriculturist: it was the land holding which gave him his qualification. With the passage of time, the availability of space for new burgage plots became limited and the property requirement stood in the way of economic expansion. By the seventeenth century the necessity to own land had decreased in importance, as Ayr, like other burghs, substituted the payment of an amount of money. Once the candidate had paid a fee (an 'entry fine') and had taken the burgess oath he was admitted a full burgess. By freeing the number of freemen and burgesses from the availability of burgh land, the number of burgesses could be increased indefinitely, thus enabling the growing burghs to transform themselves into modern trading communities[2].

Regulation of the admission of burgesses was a responsibility of the community of the burgh; a responsibility which devolved upon the Town Council as their representatives. Prospective burgesses were received and sworn in the presence of the Magistrates and Council, and their entries are, in consequence, recorded in the minute books of the burgh. Particularly in the latter half of the period dealt with in this volume, it is clear that some traders felt able to operate within the burgh without becoming burgesses, and that equally, on occasions, the Town Council moved against these 'unfree' traders, warning them to regularize their position, either by becoming burgesses or by ceasing to trade. Examples of such warnings can be found in the Council's minutes in, for example, September 1742, January 1744, December 1748 and frequently thereafter. The effect of such warnings can sometimes be seen in purchases of burgess tickets by 'unfree traders'.

[2] The most recent history of Ayr is John Strawhorn, The History of Ayr, Edinburgh, 1989, though Annie I Dunlop, ed., The Royal Burgh of Ayr, Edinburgh, 1953, remains useful; burgh organisation is discussed in David Murray, Early Burgh Organisation in Scotland, volume II, Glasgow, 1932

Throughout this period, the briefest of glances at the lists of burgesses will show that the honour was frequently bestowed on people who would have had not the least intention of trading in the burgh. The commanders of troops quartered in the town, law lords attending the circuit courts of justiciary, county gentry, notable visitors (including the Archduke of Russia in 1818)[3]: all were made burgesses. For the town it was an effective and cheap way of giving thanks 'for services done and to be done': the handing over of the burgess ticket giving point and structure to a civic welcome or reception[4]. On two occasions, a large number of honorary burgesses were enrolled at one time – in 1678 and 1715, and these are discussed in Appendices 3 and 4.

In September 1804 the Town Council considered the position of anti-burghers, that is people who, because of religious scruples, were unable or unwilling to take the burgess oath. The Council noted that for some years past, tradesmen had come into the town "to carry on Trade within this Burgh ....and that such persons would readily pay for being allowed to live and carry on trade within the Burgh without obliging them to enter and take the Burgess Oath; and further considering That were the Town to insist rigidly upon such persons taking the Burgess Oath, they must either give up Trade or leave the Town, which would be a loss to the Burgh". The tenor of this minute suggests that a blind eye had been turned to these people in the past, but that it was now felt that the position should be regularised. The Council noted that in "most towns" the oath had been dispensed with, and people allowed to trade upon payment of a reasonable sum. The Council agreed to follow suit, and enacted a scale of charges for anti-burghers:-
"For a stranger who is not entitled to an Easement in his Entry as being the Deccendent of a Guild Brother, for carrying on the Trade of a Guild, Ten Pounds sterling;
For such Person carrying on the Trade of a Burgess, Five Pounds sterling;
For a Person who is the Decendent of a Guild for carrying on the Trade of a Guild, Five Guineas, and if carrying on the Trade of a Freeman, Two Guineas:
For a Person who is the Descendent of a Burgess and carrying on only the trade of a Burgess, Two Guineas".

[3] the Archduke was on his way from Scotland to Ireland. Many of the other nobles listed in these rolls would have passed through Ayr on the same journey

[4] such honorary burgess-ships are the antecedents for the modern concept of offering 'the freedom of the burgh' to notable citizens or visitors

Additionally the Council agreed that if such persons could "get over their Religious Scruple and take the Burgess Oath", they would be admitted burgesses without further payment[5].

Between 1804 and 1819, a dozen or so people took advantage of this arrangement (see below). In April 1819 one of them, John Paterson, again brought the same issue before the Council. He stated that It had now been the practice for many years in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Paisley, &c., to admit people of his persuasion to full burgess privileges without taking the burgess oath, and asked the Town Council to grant him a burgess ticket, with the usual privileges attached thereto[6]. Paterson, with others, submitted a petition to the Council, along similar lines, in May 1819[7]. This was considered by the Town Council on 12 May 1819 and again on 19 May 1819, when they heard that what had originally been a simple oath of fidelity to the town had been gradually added to for particular political or ecclesiastical causes "which, happily, for a long time have ceased to exist". And that the Council, as far back as 1775, had felt the oath to contain superfluous articles, but had not done anything about it at that time. They also heard that honorary burgesses had never been asked to give the oath. They agreed to abolish the burgess oath, and replace it with a simple declaration. Burgesses henceforth would be required to promise loyalty to the king, and the burgh, and to grind any malt they use in the burgh in the burgh mills. A letter from the seceders, expressing their respectful thanks to the Council for this decision, was received by the Council in June 1819, and in August 1819 the Council, in response to a printed circular from the Convention of Royal Burghs urging abolition of burgess oaths, was able to note, somewhat smugly, that they had already acted[8].

The rôle, and the rights, of the burgess became increasingly anachronistic as the nineteenth century wore on; as the bounds of trade and communication were pushed further and further outwards. The Municipal Reform Act of 1833 placed restrictions on the power of the guild, and the monopolistic trading rights of burgesses were abolished by the Abolition of Burgh and Corporation Privileges Act of 1846.

Although earlier records exist, there is an unbroken run of Ayr Burgh Council minutes from 1647. It has therefore been decided to transcribe these entries from the records from 1647 until 1846, when reorganisation and modernisation of local government abolished the privileges of burgesses. It is hoped that a later volume in this series will tackle the issue of burgesses prior to 1647. The records from 1647 to 1846 cover some 8,500 names. These minute books are presently in the Ayrshire Archive Centre, Ayr, where they are held under

During the 1980s the late Alistair Lindsay began to extract from these records the names of all those granted the rights of burgess and guild brother of the burgh of Ayr. At his death, Mr Lindsay's work was almost complete. The Ayrshire Archæological and Natural History Society (AANHS) agreed with his widow that the work should be completed, and that the Society would make every effort to publish it, or arrange for others to publish it, in a worthy form. The work of editing then passed to Mrs Jean Kennedy, while correction and checking has been undertaken by Mr Robert H J Urquhart. In 1998 the AANHS agreed to a proposal from the Ayrshire Federation of Historical Societies that these transcriptions should be published within the Federation's Ayrshire Records Series.

Surnames are always given as spelled in the minutes. Forenames are generally given in the modern form. Land names are generally given in the form in which they appear in the minutes, though modern equivalents have been used in some cases, largely Ayrshire parish names, where there is no dubiety. The name 'Ayr' has been adopted throughout, though 'Air' is the general spelling in the earlier volumes.

We have followed the example set down by James R. Anderson, as spelled out in the preface to his edition of the Glasgow Burgess Rolls[10], and have not attempted a thorough annotation of the roll. Annotation has been limited to issues directly related to the volumes themselves.

The names in the list of burgesses have been taken from the following volumes of the Ayr Burgh minutes:

It should be noted that, especially in the earlier volumes, there is an overlap between volumes. During the periods of overlap, some names are found only in one volume. Some entries are found in different forms, and these are noted in the footnotes. There are no entries of burgesses recorded between December 1651 and October 1655. In September 1822, the then Town Clerk, Alexander Murdoch (b. c 1776, d. 1843)[11] produced an alphabetical list of burgesses, going back to 1760, 'to afford facility to Freemen obtaining knowledge of the time of their predecessors entry'.

This list was maintained by Murdoch and his successors until the privileges were abolished. It lists only names, but has been used by the present editors to arbitrate in a few difficult readings.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Editors record their appreciation of the help and assistance they have received from a number of people. Most prominent are the staff of South Ayrshire Libraries [SAL] and of Ayrshire Archives [AA]. From SAL, Tom Barclay and Jeanette Castle, and from AA, Kevin Wilbraham sat on the working party which oversaw progress. At the Carnegie Library, Ayr, Sheila West supervised research in the volumes and provided much help and encouragement. Also on the working party were Sheena Andrew, Rob Close, Bill Layhe, Trevor Mathews, David Reid, and Stuart Wilson. Checking and proof reading was undertaken by Jean Aitchison, Alastair Hendry, Elizabeth McFadzean, Henry Murdoch, Mair Tiley and Andrew Wilson. Alistair Lindsay received help from Bob Mair, Trevor Mathews, Jimmy Whyte and the late John Strawhorn. Alastair Hendry, Andrew Jackson and Grant Simpson helped with the interpretation and translation of the entries in Latin. Dave Killicoat generously gave Jean Kennedy assistance in handling the computer.

For illustrations we are grateful to the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University, and their Library Service Assistant, Corrina Flanagan; to the National Archives of Scotland, and Jane Brown, Head of the Historical Search Section; and to South Ayrshire Council, and Liz Kwasnik, Museums Development Officer.

The information contained within these extracts will be of considerable use to local historians, to administrative historians, economic historians, and also to mainstream historians of Scotland. These 8,500 and more names will, of course, prove to be a gold-mine for genealogists and family historians. A prime purpose of the Ayrshire Records Series is to make such information more readily available. If by so doing we encourage others to use it to enhance our understanding of Scotland, of Ayr, and of their history, our work will not have been in vain.

This project would not have come as far as it has without the generous support of a number of outside bodies. The Ayrshire Archæological and Natural History Society were able to employ professional palaeographic assistance due to a grant from the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. The costs of printing and publishing have been assisted by support from Awards for All (the Heritage Lottery Fund), South Ayrshire Council, the Marc Fitch Fund and the Scottish Local History Forum. We here gratefully acknowledge our indebtedness to them all for the very real help and encouragement which they have given us.

THE BURGESS OATH

Originally the burgess oath appears to have been a simple oath of fealty to the Sovereign. In 1819 the Town Clerk stated that in the oldest burgh records then extant, which dated from 1547, such was the case. He went on to say that in 'succeeding times [he had] reason to believe the additions to the oath must have been introduced for special political causes, or the peculiar state of ecclesiastical affairs in the Kingdom'. Such changes appear to have been introduced on an ad hoc basis.

An extremely lengthy burgess oath is found on a loose sheet within B6/18/20. This volume covers the period 1790 to 1794, and this sheet appears to be roughly contemporary with this volume. This oath is as follows:-

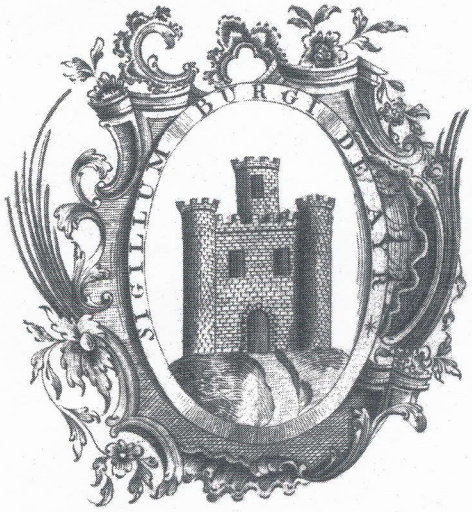

> 'Here I protest before God and your Lordships, That I profess and allow within my heart the true Religion which at this present is publickly preached within this Kingdom and authorized by the Laws thereof. I shall abide thereat and defend the same to my life's end, forsaking the Roman Religion called Popery. I shall be leel and true to Our Sovereign lord the King's Majesty and his Successors, to the Provost and Baillies of this Burgh; and shall obey the Officers thereof, fortify them in the execution of their Offices with my body & goods. I shall not colour unfree men's goods under colour of my own. I shall not purchase any Lordships or Authorities contrary to the freedom of the Burgh. In all taxations, watchings, wardings, and other burdens to be laid upon this Burgh, I shall willingly bear my part as I am commanded by the Magistrates and Council, and I shall not rise nor purchase any privileges or exemptions to be free thereof, renouncing the benefit of the same forever, and finally I shall not do, nor attempt any thing hurtful to the Liberties of this Burgh, but shall defend the same to the utmost of my power, and so often as I shall break any point of this my Oath I oblige me to pay for the common affairs the sum of One hundred pounds Scots money, and shall remain in ward till the same be paid. And what grinded malt I shall make use of within this Burgh or Liberties thereof shall be grinded at the milns of Ayr, and, if at any other mill, it is to be by toleration of the Magistrates or Tacksman of the Milns of Ayr. So help me God and by God himself'.

This would appear to be the oath which caused the abjurers such trouble (see Appendix 1). By 1819 the oath was regarded, not only by the anti-burghers, but generally, as out-moded, unnecessary and inimical to the economic development of the Burgh. By 1819 the equivalent oath had been abolished in Edinburgh, Glasgow and elsewhere: later that year a circular from the Convention of Royal Burghs recommended abolition, and the replacement of the oath with a simple declaration. Ayr, ahead of the field, had abolished the oath in May 1819, replacing it with the following declaration.:-

> 'I _____ do sincerely promise and engage That I will be true and faithful to his Majesty the King and to the Magistrates and Councill of this Burgh, and community thereof, in all things lawful, as a Burgess and Guild Brother or Burgess and Freeman of the Burgh of Ayr and shall with heart and hand obey the Magistrates in all acts lawful required by them to be done by me within burgh as a Burgess; and if I wilfully refuse so to act I am to forfeit my freedom of "Burgh free" as enacted in an Act of Council of date the nineteenth day of May Eighteen hundred and nineteen to which I consent; and what grinded malt I shall make use of within this Burgh or Liberties thereof shall be grinded at the Mills of Ayr or otherwise if at any other Mill, by Toleration of the Magistrates or Tacksmen of the Mills of Ayr for the time being.'

ANTI-BURGHERS

As explained in the introduction, in 1804 the Town Council agreed to allow people to trade in the town, even though they had religious scruples which prevented them from taking the burgess oath. Those who took advantage of this concession, which was rendered redundant in 1819 when a new burgess oath was introduced, are listed below.

Name	Description	Status	Date
Williamson, Andrew	by purchase	B & GB	12 Sep 1804
Blair, Moncrief	by purchase	B & GB	12 Sep 1804
Bruce, James	maltster, s. of late David B., boatman, B & GB	B & GB	19 Sep 1804

McKay, Alexander	grocer, by purchase	B & GB	23 Oct 1816
Pursal, John[2]	travelling merchant, by purchase	B & GB	23 Mar 1818

[1] the minutes do not mention any conscientious objection on Kennedy's part. He is recorded merely as having paid £5 for the right to trade "under the qualification that if he hereafter shall enter Guild that sum shall account in part"

[2] paid £5 for the right to trade. No mention of any conscientious objection

TWO ENTRIES IN LATIN

Two of the entries of burgesses are minuted with lengthy encomia in Latin. The first is that for Charles Cuningham a Cangee, who was entered as a Burgess and Guild Brother on 8 November 1658. This reads:-

25 OCTOBER 1658 CAROLUS CUNIGAMIUS A CANGEE
Apud Burgum de Air octavo Calend. Novembris Aerae Christianae 1658

Quo die Senatus Ærensis perpendens quibus et quot modis civitas sua devincta sit familiae Cunigamiorum praecipue nobili et praepotenti domino Comiti Glencairne eiusdem principi protopatrii eiusque maioribus quum ob benefacta plurima tum et ob operam laboranti sepius nunc et olim graviter impertitam Quodque nobilis et praepotens dominus Carolus Cunigamius a Cangee etc (cuius proavi ex eadem familia latifundia et honores in Gallia tenuere) Gallia degens et possit apud Gallos civibus nostris prodesse et civitati honori esse et fulcro Censuit ideo dictum nobilem dominum Monsieur de Cangee etc civitate omni iure et privilegio burgensis de Air et confratris gilde eiusdem quam optimo maximo donandum deque facto donavit et donat Inque burgensem et fratrem Gilde recepit recipit et matriculavit Insertum in et Extractum de libris consilii dicti burgi de Air per me Willielmum Mitchell publicum amanuensem civitatis antedicte Sigillum commune appenditur.

25 October 1658 Charles Cuningham a Cangee
[At the burgh of Air on 8 Kal Nov, AD 1658

On which day the Senate of Ayr, considering in what and how many ways their city is bound to the family of Cunningham, and especially to the noble and prepotent lord the Earl of Glencairn, its principal head, and to his ancestors, both for very many benefits, and for the great pains he has frequently taken and bestowed both now and formerly; And because the noble and prepotent lord Charles Cunningham a Cangee, etc. (whose forefathers from the same family held estates and honours in France), living in France, could be of advantage to our citizens [in dealings] with the French and be an honour and support to the city; Deemed [or considered] the said noble lord Monsieur de Cangee, etc., to be most highly worthy of being given by the whole city, and has de facto given and gives, the right and privilege of a burgess of Air and brother of the guild of the same, And has received, receives and has matriculated him as a burgess and brother of the guild. Inserted in and extracted from the books of council of the said burgh of Air by me William Mitchell, public amanuensis [town clerk] of the aforesaid city. The common seal is appended.]

The other Latin entry is that for Colonel Yaxley Robsoun, who was entered as a Burgess and Guild Brother on 27 September 1661. This reads:-

27 SEPTEMBER 1661

COLONEL YAXLEY ROBSON

Apud Burgum de Air vigesimo septimo die mensis septembris anno domini millesimo sextencesimo sexagesimo primo Regni que SDN Caroli dei gratia Magnae Britanniae franciae et hiberniae Regis fideique defensoris anno decimo tertio
Quo die in presencia praepositi ballivorum decani Gilde et consiliariorum dicti burgi honorabilis vir Chiliarchus Yaxlius Robsoun quondam gubernator castrorum Aerensium factus fuit et creatus civis ac frater de Gild dictae civitatis Ærensis ob optimum eius studium ac favorem et eius benefacta et facienda in posterum ab eo in dictae civitatis Aerensis commodum et utilitatem Et quoniam nobis certo cognitum est dum in statione sua quantum potuit et in illo ____ in restauratione serenissinnae Regiae Maiestatis SDN ac reductione instrumentarium fuisse dum praeesset dictis castris Aerensibus Qui iuramentum fidelitatis prestitit SDN regi et dictae civitati ut moris ac est consuetudo datum et extractum sub sigillo communi dicti burgi.

[At the burgh of Air on the 27th day of September AD 1661, and the 13th year of the reign [of Charles II]

On which day, in presence of the provost, bailies, Dean of Guild and councillors of the said burgh, the honourable man Chiliarchus Yaxley Robsoun, former governor of the castles [citadel] of Ayr, was made and created a citizen and brother of the guild of the said city of Ayr for his excellent zeal and favour, and the good deeds done by him and to be done in future for the advantage and utility of the said city of Ayr; And whereas it is certainly known to us that while in his post he did as much as he could for the restoration of our sovereign lord the King ____ while he was in command of the said castles of Ayr; Who took oath of fealty to the King and the said city as the use and custom is. Given and extracted under the common seal of the said burgh.]

MASS ENROLMENT IN 1678

The mass entry of burgesses over 4 days in March 1678 was politically inspired; it was a part of Charles II's plan to intimidate and subdue those who opposed his rule and his policies. It is followed in the text by a judicious note by the Town Clerk. In this, he appears to be showing that he was complying with directions from royal officials, but also indicating to posterity that he was acting in a situation where passive resistance was the only feasible option. He also, finally, notes the lack of courtesy extended to him and his scribe. The note reads as follows:

"It is to be remembered
That the making of the noblemen gentlemen and oyrs abovenamed Burgesses and friemen of the Burgh and friemen of the Burgh was accationed by the privie Councill thair sending of ane committie of the Councill to this Burgh qlk Committie consisted of ten noblemen qrof fyve was ane quorum

The Committie caused cite in the noblemen and heretors of the Schyr for taking of the band against the conventicles and quho refuised wer cited upon ane lybll for keiping of conventicles hearing of vagrant preachers and speaking with intercomuned persones

The Committie lykwayes chaired the noblemen and gentlemen with lawborrowes at his Majesties instance and Denunced thair was seall gentlemen of the Schyre imprisoned at Air and particullarly the Laird of Grimat yong Knockdolien Grange kennedie Drumochrein elder knockdon yr & seall uthers

The Committie brought alongs with them to Air the ragement of redcoats four bress gunes twelve wagons and thair was quartered in Alloway and Burrowfield a squad of the kings horss guard consisting of fourtie

The entrie of the Committie & forces with thair arteillerie was upon the sevent of februar last and remained to the fyftein of March instant and upon the fiftein the committie and eight hunder of the raigement with yr arteillerie removed and my Lord Ross and two hundreth of the foot with the fourtie horss remained whill the nyntein of this instant and yr was litle or nothing payed for yr quarters And at this tym thair was six or seven thousand northland men and highland men quartered in this schyre round about the Burgh quho in lyk mainer maid no payment for quarters but took money for dry quarters and wer much given for stelth thes of the north and highlands

As lykwayes it is to be remembred that the Clerk nor his man got no drink money but great paines trouble and vexation"

MUSTER ROLL OF 1715

On 23 September 1715 the following letter from the Duke of Argyle, the Commander-in-Chief of the forces in North Britain, was placed before the Town Council:

"Edinburgh, 15 Sept[embe]r 1715. Gentlemen, Finding the Lord Lieutenant of your County is not yet come down, nor has appointed deputy Lieutenants to settle matters as his Majesties service requirs and being informed since my arrival at this place that the Burgh of Ayr had a considerable number of well armed men ready to serve his Majesty to who they have showen themselves so wel affected. I must lose no tyme in praying you would Furthwith send what number of men you can get together to Stirling with such officers as you shal think fitt to trust the command of them to. This will be of infinite service to his Majesty and wil not fail of being acknowledged as such.
I must furder inform you that by all the acco[unt]s I receive from different parts of the kingdom the dissaffected highlanders are actually gathering together, so that it will be very highly for his Majestys service that all the well affected men that are armed about your Countrey should hold themselves in readyness to march & even begin to assemble. The reason I am obliedged to call you out first is that I judge the Burrows to be the readyest, the countrey people being at present so much taken up with the harvest. I desire you would send with the armed men, what ammunition you can, I have sent the like request to the rest of the wel affected Burrows. I am Gentlemen your most faithfull & obedient s[ervan]t Sic subscribitur Argyll".

The cause of Argyle's concern was the rising under the Earl of Mar, supporting James Stuart, the Old Pretender. Mar raised his standard in Perth on 6 September, but retreated after the battle of Sheriffmuir, 13 November 1715, where Argyle's 3300 men presumably included the officers and men from the two companies of foot which marched from Ayr on 25 September, and whose names, reprinted below, were recorded in the burgh records. As an incentive to enlist these men were offered burgess rights, free of charge, as can be seen in the entries for September 1715.
